

8th October 2012: Our newly planted trees survived the summer!!

After a long hot summer in the Sahara with temperatures rising above 45 degrees Celsius we received really good news: many of the trees that we had planted between October 2011 and April 2012 have survived! They look so determined to grow and with the continuous care that they have received from Abderazak, our new tree-caretaker, and all the people helping him many small trees have managed to survive.

We do not know exactly how many, we will be checking this in November but in this very harsh environment every tree that survives gives us hope and determination to continue!! Thank you all for supporting us with our projects!

Wanda Hebly, Sahara-Roots

April 2012

September 2012

